No Kid Hungry has been selected as the beneficiary of a new book called HOME.

HOME will be a timely recreation of Edith Wharton’s The Book of the Homeless—a fundraising effort for war relief in 1916 to help refugees and children during WWI—featuring over 100 artists, poets, chefs, designers, photographers, and writers who will contribute pages to define what home means to them.

And in the steps of Wharton, all royalties from the sale of this book will support Share Our Strength’s essential mission to help hungry children and families. This project is being led by interior designer and philanthropist, Charlotte Moss, and will be published by Rizzoli New York in the Fall 2021.
